Hussin bin Mohamad v Public Prosecutor and another appeal

COURT OF APPEAL (PUTRAJAYA) — CRIMINAL APPEAL NOS W-05–302–10 OF 2014 AND W-05–312–11 OF 2014
MOHTARUDIN BAKI, TENGKU MAIMUN AND ZAKARIA SAM JJCA

Criminal Procedure — Appeal — Appeal against conviction and sentence — Drug trafficking offence — Whether informer assumed role of agent provocateur — Whether failure of prosecution to offer or call informer compromised case for prosecution — Whether adverse inference ought to be invoked — Whether conviction and sentence safe

This was an appeal against the decision of the High Court. The prosecution's case hinged on the evidence of the agent provocateur ('SP4') that, through his informer, he was introduced to the first appellant. SP4 said that in the first appellant's taxi, the two had negotiated for the purchase of 200g of syabu at a total price of RM28,000. The first appellant made a telephone call and shortly after that, the second appellant arrived and got into the taxi. From his left sock, the second appellant took out a plastic packet containing the drugs. The appellants were arrested. In the first appellant's defence, he was driving the taxi when he received a telephone call from one Aboy, a moneylender to whom the first appellant owed some money. The first appellant received a telephone call from the second appellant asking him to send the second appellant to Kg Malaysia. He informed the second appellant that he was at Jalan Imbi. When the first appellant got back to his taxi, he found two men standing in front of the taxi. One of them was Aboy and the other was unknown to him. The unknown man was later identified as SP4. According to the first appellant, SP4 identified himself as a police officer and has asked for the first appellant's identity card. At that point of time, the second appellant arrived. After that, policemen in plainclothes came and the appellants were arrested. Both the appellants denied being in the taxi and having any dealing with SP4 as regards the dangerous drugs. The trial judge found the defence to be a mere denial and had not raised a reasonable doubt on the prosecution's case. The appellants were therefore convicted and sentenced to death. Hence, the appeal. The first appellant submitted that the informer had assumed the role of an agent provocateur and the failure of the prosecution to offer or call him had compromised the case for the prosecution; the informer should have been called by the prosecution or at least offered to the defence; the identity of the informer had been disclosed by SP4 and the informer was a material witness who could either verify or deny the prosecution's version.

Held, allowing the appeal; setting aside the convictions and sentence of the High Court:

(1) The agent provocateur did not play an active role in the commission of the offence. There was no communication or negotiation between the agent provocateur and the first appellant on the amount of drugs to be supplied and on the price of the drugs prior to the day and time stated in the charge (see para 15).

(2) The fact that SP4 had brought the exact amount of money showed that the price had been agreed upon earlier on between the informer and the first appellant. The negotiations for the amount and price of the drugs had been finalised or completed between the informer and the first appellant. This was fortified by the evidence of SP4 that he was merely taking delivery of the drugs (see para 16).

(3) The failure of the prosecution to call or to offer the informer to the defence had compromised the prosecution's case and had attracted the adverse inference under s 114(g) of the Evidence Act 1950. Particularly when the identity of the informer had been disclosed and at all material times, the informer was available. SP4 had confirmed that the informer was being detained at Sungai Buloh prison (see para 19).

(4) This was a case where the informer had taken an active role in placing the order and agreeing on the price. It was also the informer who had communicated with the first appellant on the place of delivery. The informer had exceeded his role as an informer and had assumed the mantle of an agent provocateur (see para 17).

(5) There was no reason why SP4 could not adhere to the protocol if the raid in this instant case was an official raid. The trial judge failed to direct his mind to the fact that in the instant case, SP4 had blatantly disregarded the protocol in the transaction, raising questions on his credibility. The creditworthiness of SP4 had been rebutted and looking at the evidence in totality, the convictions of the appellants were unsafe. The appellants were acquitted and discharged (see paras 23 & 27).

[Bahasa Malaysia summary

Ini adalah rayuan terhadap keputusan Mahkamah Tinggi. Kes pendakwaan berdasarkan keterangan ejen perangkap ('SP4') bahawa, melalui pemberi maklumatnya, dia telah diperkenalkan kepada perayu pertama. SP4 menyatakan bahawa dalam teksi perayu pertama, mereka berdua telah berunding untuk belian 200g syabu pada harga berjumlah RM28,000. Perayu pertama telah membuat panggilan telefon dan sejurus kemudian, perayu kedua tiba dan masuk ke dalam teksi itu. Dari stokin sebelah kirinya, perayu kedua mengeluarkan bungkusan plastik yang mengandungi dadah. Perayu-perayu telah ditangkap. Dalam pembelaan perayu pertama, dia sedang memandu teksi itu apabila dia menerima panggilan telefon daripada Aboy, pemberi pinjam wang yang mana perayu pertama berhutang wang dengannya. Perayu pertama telah menerima panggilan telefon daripada perayu kedua memintanya menghantar perayu kedua ke Kg Malaysia. Dia telah memberitahu perayu kedua bahawa dia berada di Jalan Imbi. Apabila perayu pertama masuk balik ke dalam teksinya, dia mendapati dua lelaki berdiri di depan teksi itu. Salah seorang daripada mereka adalah Aboy dan seorang lagi tidak dikenalinya. Lelaki yang tidak dikenali itu kemudian dikenal pasti sebagai SP4. Menurut perayu pertama, SP4 telah memperkenalkan dirinya sebagai pegawai polis dan meminta kad pengenalan perayu pertama. Pada masa itu, perayu kedua telah muncul. Selepas itu, polis dalam pakaian biasa tiba dan perayu-perayu telah ditangkap. Kedua-dua perayu telah menafikan berada dalam teksi itu dan mempunyai apa-apa urusan dengan SP4 berkaitan dadah berbahaya. Hakim perbicaraan mendapati pembelaan itu hanya penafian dan tidak menimbulkan apa-apa keraguan munasabah terhadap kes pendakwaan. Perayu-perayu dengan itu telah disabit dan dihukum mati. Justeru, rayuan ini. Perayu pertama telah berhujah bahawa pemberi maklumat itu telah membawa peranan ejen perangkap dan kegagalan pendakwaan untuk menawar atau memanggilnya telah menjejaskan kes pendakwaan; pemberi maklumat itu sepatutnya dipanggil oleh pendakwaan atau sekurang-kurangnya ditawarkan kepada pihak pembelaan; identiti pemberi maklumat telah didedahkan oleh SP4 dan pemberi maklumat itu merupakan saksi utama yang boleh sama ada mengesah atau menafikan versi pendakwaan.

Diputuskan, membenarkan rayuan; mengetepikan sabitan dan hukuman Mahkamah Tinggi:

(1) Ejen perangkap itu tidak memainkan peranan aktif dalam perlakuan kesalahan itu. Tiada komunikasi atau rundingan antara ejen perangkap dan perayu pertama tentang jumlah dadah yang dibekal dan pada harga dadah itu sebelum hari dan masa yang dinyatakan dalam pertuduhan (lihat perenggan 15).

(2) Fakta bahawa SP4 telah membawa jumlah tepat wang itu menunjukkan bahawa suatu harga telah dipersetujui terlebih dahulu antara pemberi maklumat dan perayu pertama. Rundingan untuk jumlah dan harga dadah itu telah diputuskan atau diselesaikan antara pemberi maklumat dan perayu pertama. Ini diperkuatkan dengan keterangan SP4 bahawa dia hanya membuat penghantaran dadah itu (lihat perenggan 16).

(3) Kegagalan pendakwaan untuk memanggil atau menawarkan pemberi maklumat kepada pihak pembelaan telah menjejaskan kes pendakwaan dan menarik inferens bertentangan di bawah s 114(g) Akta Keterangan 1950. Khususnya apabila identiti pemberi maklumat telah didedahkan dan pada setiap masa matan, pemberi maklumat telah sedia ada. SP4 telah mengesahkan bahawa pemberi maklumat sedang ditahan di penjara Sungai Buloh (lihat perenggan 19).

(4) Ini adalah kes di mana pemberi maklumat telah memainkan peranan aktif dalam meletakkan pesanan dan bersetuju dengan harga. Ia juga adalah pemberi maklumat yang telah berkomunikasi dengan perayu pertama tentang tempat penghantaran. Pemberi maklumat itu telah melampaui peranannya sebagai pemberi maklumat dan telah memainkan peranan ejen perangkap (lihat perenggan 17).

(5) Tiada sebab kenapa SP4 tidak boleh mematuhi protokol jika serbuan dalam kes ini adalah serbuan rasmi. Hakim perbicaraan gagal mengarahkan minda beliau kepada fakta bahawa dalam kes ini, SP4 telah mengabaikan langsung protokol dalam transaksi itu, sehingga menimbulkan persoalan tentang kebolehpercayaannya. Kebolehpercayaan SP4 telah dipatahkan dan melihat keterangan secara menyeluruh, sabitan-sabitan perayu-perayu tidak selamat. Perayu-perayu dengan itu dilepas dan dibebaskan (lihat perenggan 27).]

Tengku Maimun JCA:

INTRODUCTION

[1] Both the appellants were charged in the High Court at Kuala Lumpur for the following offence:

> Bahawa kamu bersama-sama pada 20/07/2011 jam lebih kurang 9.45 malam, Jalan 1/77B, Off Jalan Imbi, di dalam Daerah Dang Wangi, Bandaraya Kuala Lumpur, Wilayah Persekutuan, telah didapati mengedar dadah berbahaya iaitu metamphetamine seberat 72.2 gram, dan dengan itu kamu telah melakukan suatu kesalahan di bawahseksyen 39B(1)(a) Akta Dadah Berbahaya 1952 yang boleh dihukum di bawahseksyen 39B(2) Akta yang sama di baca bersamaseksyen 34 Kanun Keseksaan.

[2] The appellants were both convicted and sentenced to death by the High Court. Aggrieved by the decision, the appellants filed separate appeal to the Court of Appeal. We heard both the appeals together, at the end of which we unanimously allowed the appeals. Our reasons now follow.

THE PROSECUTION'S CASE

[3] In brief, the prosecution's case hinged on the evidence of the agent provocateur, Insp Luther bin Nurjip @ Andrew (SP4). In essence the evidence of SP4 was that, through his informer, he was introduced to the first appellant. On the material day and time as in the charge, SP4 said that in the first appellant's taxi, he had negotiated with the first appellant for the purchase of 200g of syabu at a total price of RM28,000. Upon the first appellant having sight of the money, SP4 said that the first appellant made a telephone call and shortly thereafter, the second appellant arrived and got into the taxi. From his left sock, the second appellant took out a plastic packet containing the drugs.

[4] Upon analysis by the chemist, Muzaiyah bt Mohd Kaprawi (SP3), the drugs were confirmed to be 72.2g of metamphetamine.

THE DEFENCE CASE

[5] The defence version can be summarised as follows. On the day in question, the first appellant was driving the taxi when he received a telephone call from one Aboy, a moneylender to whom the first appellant owed some money. When the first appellant reached Jalan Imbi, he stopped at 7 Eleven to buy cigarettes. On his way to 7 Eleven, he received a telephone call from the second appellant asking him to send the second appellant to Kg Malaysia. He informed the second appellant that he was at Jalan Imbi. When the first appellant got back to his taxi, he found two (2) men standing in front of the taxi.One of them was Aboy and the other was unknown to him. The unknown man was later identified as SP4.

[6] According to the first appellant, SP4 identified himself as a police officer and has asked for the first appellant's identity card. At that point of time, the second appellant arrived. SP4 had also asked the second appellant to show his passport. Thereafter policemen in plain clothes came and the appellants were arrested. Both the appellants denied being in the taxi and having any dealing with SP4 as regards the dangerous drugs.

[7] The learned trial judge found the defence to be a mere denial and had not raised a reasonable doubt on the prosecution's case. The appellants were therefore convicted and sentenced to death, hence the appeal.

THE APPEAL

[8] Before us, learned counsel for the first appellant canvassed only one issue, namely that the informer had assumed the mantle of an agent provocateur and the failure of the prosecution to offer or call him had compromised the case for the prosecution.

[9] Relying on Wan Mohd Azman bin Hassan @ Wan Ali v Public Prosecutor [2010] 4 MLJ 141; [2010] 2 AMR 834; and Wan Yurilhami Wan Yaacob & Anor v Public Prosecutor [2010] 1 MLJ 749; [2010] 1 CLJ 17, learned counsel submitted that in the instant case, the informer had exceeded his role of merely giving information wherein the informer had immersed in the sting operation by placing an order for the 200g of metamphetamine, on behalf of SP4.

[10] The informer, argued learned counsel, should have been called by the prosecution or at least offered to the defence. The identity of the informer had been disclosed by SP4 and the informer is a material witness who could either verify or deny the prosecution's version.

[11] For the second appellant, learned counsel took issue on the credibility of SP4. As a brief background, in a drug trafficking case in High Court 2, Kuala Lumpur (No 45A-13–05 of 2012), where SP4 had also acted as an agent provocateur (the Bird's case), SP4 was found to be not a credible witness. His credibility was impeached and the decision of the High Court in Bird's case was affirmed by the Court of Appeal.

[12] Learned counsel for the second appellant submitted that the decision in Bird's case supported their argument that the credit worthiness of an agent provocateur can be rebutted despite the provisions of s 40A(i) of the Dangerous

Drugs Act 1952 and that in the instant case, the credit worthiness of SP4 had been rebutted.

[13] Learned counsel for both the appellants had also adopted the submissions of the other.

FINDINGS

The informer

[14] On the issue of the informer, it is useful to reproduce the judgment of the Federal Court in the case of Wan Mohd Azman, where Abdull Hamid Embong FCJ said:

> [9] In a typical police undercover operation scenario (as happened in this case), the police would receive information from its informer of a drug trafficking activity. An agent provocateur, normally himself a police officer, will then be assigned to undertake what is called a 'sting operation'. The agent provocateur will get in touch with the informer. The informer will then arrange for an introduction and meeting between the agent provocateur, (who will play the role of a drug-buyer) and the drug trafficker. The informer will take no further active role and normally disappear. Negotiations will then take place between the agent provocateur and the drug trafficker where the amount of drugs to be supplied, its price and place of delivery will be discussed and agreed upon. The agent provocateur himself thus takes an active role in the commission of the offence. ...

[15] In the instant case, the agent provocateur did not play an active role in the commission of the offence. There was no communication or negotiation between the agent provocateur and the first appellant on the amount of drugs to be supplied and on the price of the drugs prior to the day and time stated in the charge. This was reflected in the following evidence of SP4 at p 40 of the appeal record Vol 1:

> A: Sumber memaklumkan bahawa pada suatu masa lelaki Pakistan itu boleh menyediakan hingga 200 gram dadah syabu. Saya beri arahan kepada sumber agar sumber membuat pesanan kepada lelaki Pakistan tersebut dan beritahu lelaki Pakistan itu selepas order dan ambil barang boss akan turun sendiri ambil barang tersebut.
> Q: Apa maksud 'boss'?
> A: Saya bertindak sebagai boss.

And at p 45 of the appeal record Vol 1, SP4 further stated that:

> A: Dalam teksi itu, dia tawarkan saya dadah syabu 200 gram. Setiap 50 gram berharga RM7000,00. Untuk 200 gram berharga RM28,000. Kemudian dia telah minta saya tunjukkan wang dan beritahu jika dia nampak wang itu, dia akan tunjukkan dadah syabu. Kemudian saya mengeluarkan wang sebanyak RM28,000.

Sebaik saya buka beg dan tunjuk kepada Husin RM28,000 dalam paper bag itu.

[16] SP4 had said that he brought RM28,000 for the 200g of Syabu. This was consistent with the price of RM7000 per 50g. It must be emphasised that SP4 was not in communication with the first appellant prior to the raid itself. In our judgment, the fact that SP4 had brought the exact amount of money showed that the price had been agreed upon earlier on between the informer and the first appellant. Put in another way, the negotiations for the amount and price of the drugs had been finalised or completed between the informer and the first appellant. Our view is fortified by the evidence of SP4 that he was merely taking delivery of the drugs.

[17] From the above, it was thus clear that this was not a case where the informer merely arranged for an introduction and meeting between SP4 and the first appellant and then disappeared, but this was a case where the informer had taken an active role in placing the order and agreeing on the price. It was also the informer who had communicated with the first appellant on the place of delivery. We therefore agreed with learned counsel for the first appellant that the informer had exceeded his role as an informer and had assumed the mantle of an agent provocateur.

[18] The law on an informer and agent provocateur has been spelt out in a number of authorities. Suffice if we refer to Wan Yurillhami Wan Yaacob, where Zulkefli Makinudin FCJ (as he then was) speaking for the Federal Court said that:

> [16] ... the position in law in relation to ss 40 and 40A of the Act is well settled and clear. The informer is protected from giving evidence whilst an agent provocateur is not protected. In other works, if a person is only an informer, the prosecution is not required to call him as a witness or offering him to the defence. An informer is protected under s 40 of the Act. On the other hand if a person is an agent provocateur, he is required to give evidence in court as a prosecution witness and if he is not called he has to be offered and make available to the defence. Failure to comply with his requirement will attract the application of adverse inference under s 114(g) of the Evidence Act against the prosecution.

[19] Applying the above principle to the facts of the instant appeal, we found that the failure of the prosecution to call or to offer the informer to the defence had compromised the prosecution's case and had attracted the adverse inference under s 114(g) of the Evidence Act 1950. Particularly when the identity of the informer had been disclosed as Chan Boon Tat, also known as Aboy and/or Ah Long and at all material times, the informer was available. SP4 had confirmed that the informer was being detained at Sg Buloh prison.

CREDIBILITY OF SP4

[20] The trial judge had made a finding that SP4 was a credible witness. For convenience we reproduced the relevant finding of the learned trial judge:

> 3 Tak dinafikan kredibiliti SP4 Inspektor Luther telah diimpeach di Mahkamah Tinggi Jenayah 2 Kuala Lumpur. Namun impeachment itu tidak boleh dipakai di Mahkamah Tinggi ini. Rujuk S. Augustine Paul — Impeachment Proceedings. CLJ mukasurat 35 berbunyi 'where the credit of a witness has been impeached in one case, there is no justification for a Court to consider that fact in evaluating the credibility of the same witness in another case. The issue must be decided by the Court on the evidence before it'.
> ... Mahkamah menerima keterangan SP4 dan mendapati beliau adalah saksi yang kredibel dalam kes ini.

[21] Indeed it was not the complaint of learned counsel for the second appellant that the trial judge had failed to consider that SP4's credibility had been impeached in another court. The complaint of learned counsel was that it was not sufficient for the learned trial judge to simply reject the evidence of the defence witnesses and to accept the evidence of SP4 without assessing the facts before him in relation to the credibility of SP4.

[22] We were mindful of the principle that credibility of witnesses is essentially a matter for the trial judge. However, on the facts of this case, we found merits in the complaint of learned counsel. Confronted with the challenge by the defence as to the credibility of SP4 and given that the presumption of credit worthiness of an agent provocateur is rebuttable (see Wan Mohd Azman, we agreed with learned counsel that the learned trial judge ought to have assessed the following facts which were before him, in relation to the credibility of SP4, which His Lordship failed to do:

(a) SP4 admitted that in Bird's case, he had purchased drugs with the informer's money and he had given the drugs to the informer and that he had himself engaged in drug trafficking in the course of Bird's case.

(b) SP4 had stated in Bird's case that the flash roll would be obtained from Bukit Aman and that the amount taken for each project will be recorded.

(c) SP4 stated that he had used genuine money in the sum of RM1000 and as for the remainder, he had obtained and used counterfeit money.

(d) SP4 admitted that the flash roll used in the transaction with the appellants in the instant case was not from Polis DiRaja Malaysia (PDRM) and that there was no record of such transaction with PDRM.

(e) in the instant case, SP4 had disregarded the protocol, which learned counsel submitted, had raised doubts as to whether or not the raid had actually taken place.

[23] We agreed with learned counsel that there was no reason why SP4 could not adhere to the protocol if the raid in this instant case was an official raid. The learned trial judge failed to direct his mind to the fact that as in Bird's case, in the instant case, SP4 had blatantly disregarded the protocol in the transaction, raising questions on his credibility.

[24] We next examined the evidence of SP4 that the second appellant had taken the packet of drugs from his left socks. We noted that generally, there would have been a seizure of the items from where the drugs were found. In the present case however, no socks were seized. Neither was there any photograph taken of the socks from where the drugs were allegedly found. And the search list did not state that the drugs were found or recovered from the socks either. We further noted that the column 'Bagaimana Didapati dan Di Mana Di Dapati' in the search list (exhs p 15 & 16) was left blank. Since it was the defence version that the appellants never got inside the taxi and that the second appellant was not wearing socks and shoes but was wearing slippers instead, the absence of any evidence on the socks and the absence of any evidence in the contemporaneous documentary evidence on where the drugs were found had left a lingering doubt on our minds whether the drugs were indeed taken out by the second appellant from the socks.

[25] SP4 had also given evidence that the informer had called the first appellant, to inform the first appellant that he was at 7 Eleven Jalan Imbi. The first appellant's version was that the informer/ Aboy had called him several times as regards the loan. It was further the evidence of SP4 that upon being shown the money, the first appellant made a telephone call to the second appellant. The phones were seized from the appellants but the records of the phone logs were not produced to support the prosecution's version.

[26] We found the evidence of SP4 of what transpired in the taxi lacked corroboration (see Chai Tee Keiong lwn Pendakwa Raya [2014] 2 MLJ 246) and we found that the learned trial judge had failed to address the issues raised by the defence (see p 277 appeal record Vol 1). In our judgment, the failure by the learned trial judge to direct his mind to the issues raised resulted in there being no judicial appreciation by the learned trial judge of the issues raised, warranting appellate intervention.

CONCLUSION

[27] Having regard to all the above, we took the view that the credit worthiness of SP4 had been rebutted and looking at the evidence in totality, we found the convictions of the appellants unsafe. We unanimously allowed the appeal. We set aside the convictions and sentence imposed by the High Court. The appellants were acquitted and discharged.

Appeal allowed; convictions and sentence of the High Court set aside.
